4 THINGS TO KNOW

Richard Cole, 103, last WWII Doolittle Raider, dies

Cole was part of the daring WWII attack on Japan.

Retired Lt. Col. Richard "Dick" Cole, the last of the 80 Doolittle Tokyo Raiders who carried out the daring U.S. attack on Japan during World War II, died Tuesday at a military hospital in Texas. He was 103.

Robert Whetstone, a spokesman for Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, confirmed Cole's death. Whetstone had no immediate additional details.

Cole, who lived in Comfort, Texas, had stayed active even in recent years, attending air shows and participating in commemorative events including April 18, 2017, ceremonies for the raid's 75th anniversary at the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force near Dayton, Ohio.

Cole was mission commander Jimmy Doolittle's co-pilot in the attack less than five months after the December 1941 Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor.

Doolittle died in 1993. The Gen. James "Jimmy" H. Doolittle Archives are at the University of Texas at Dallas. Cole's papers are also part of the school's History of Aviation Collection.

Cole was a Dayton-area native who recounted riding his bicycle as a child to watch planes at Mc-Cook Field, a military testing air base there. He dreamed of being a pilot and after attending Ohio University, enlisted in the Army Air Corps in 1940. Stationed in South Carolina, he signed up as a volunteer for a secret mission he knew would be dangerous, but not much else about. They trained at Eglin Air Force to fly B-25 bombers on short take-offs, in preparation for flying off an aircraft carrier.

The Raiders launched their assault April 18, 1942, in B-25 bombers from the U.S.S. Hornet. Suspecting they had been detected by Japanese patrols, they left farther away from Japan than planned.

The crews of the 16 planes were "very quiet" as they neared Japan, Cole recalled, saying his role next to Doolittle was to "be seen, not heard. ... You didn't speak until spoken to." But the country song "Wabash Cannonball" started running through his head and he unconsciously began tapping his toe, which caught Doolittle's attention. He shot Cole a look, he recalled with a laugh.

Doolittle soon ordered bomb bay doors opened, and the attack was on against what turned out to be limited anti-aircraft fire in the surprise attack.

They then headed to China, running out of fuel. Cole said Doolittle gave the command to prepare to bail out as they neared the coast, adding: "I wish you all good luck."

Cole said it was scary to parachute into a dark "unknown" in rough weather. His parachute caught in a tree, leaving him dangling but safe. Chinese partisans helped lead him and other Raiders to safety.

Three Raiders died trying to reach China, and eight were captured by Japanese soldiers. Three were executed, and a fourth died in captivity.

Cole recalled that Doolittle was distraught at first, upset that he had lost all of his planes and some of his men. Doolittle would later receive the Medal of Honor.

The raid inflicted scattered damage while providing a psychological lift back home. The stunned Japanese military diverted resources after a string of Pacific successes.

"Seven decades later, we are still awed by the sheer audacity of the Doolittle raid and the incredible men whose grit and bravery made it possible," Democratic House leader Nancy Pelosi of California said when the Congressional Gold Medal was awarded to the Raiders in a 2015 ceremony. "Though time has thinned their ranks, it will never dim the daring of their deeds."

Cole continued to fly missions in the China-Burma-India theater until 1944, and had peacetime service assignments in several states.

In an AP interview in April 2017, Cole described as "a somber affair" the toast he planned to carry out to end a long Raider tradition. Using goblets engraved with their names, they each year lifted them and sipped cognac in tribute to those who had gone before. Retired Staff Sgt. David Thatcher died in 2016 at age 94 in Missoula, Montana.

Doolittle organized reunions that became annual affairs, and Cole was a regular. He also took part in other special events, including leading a special public "final toast" ceremony at the museum in 2013, when four Raiders were still alive. He said then: "May they rest in peace."

He said in April 2017 he hadn't expected to be the last survivor, since he was older than most on the mission.

Cole attributed his longevity to being an optimist and living a life of "moderation." He said he believed he spoke for all Raiders when he said they didn't want any more recognition than all the others who put their lives on the line in the war effort. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wynn removes security head after spy admission

2 Wynn Resorts removed its security chief after he acknowledged spying on a former employee following allegations of sexual misconduct against company founder Steve Wynn came to light. CEO Matthew Maddox said James Stern, the executive vice president of corporate security, was informed Saturday the company would "no longer require his services," according to a lengthy legal brief to the Massachusetts Gaming Commission released Tuesday. Stern told the commission last week he'd surveilled company co-founder Elaine Wynn and three employees, including one named in The Wall Street Journal's 2018 report about the misconduct allegations. Steve Wynn has denied the sexual misconduct allegations. The gaming commission, following last week's hearings, is deliberating privately on whether Wynn Resorts is still suitable to hold a state casino license. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Public health emergency as measles outbreak hits NYC

3 New York City declared a public health emergency Tuesday over a measles outbreak centered in an ultra-Orthodox Jewish community and ordered mandatory vaccinations in the neighborhood. Mayor Bill de Blasio announced the unusual order amid what he said was a measles crisis in Brooklyn's Williamsburg section, where more than 250 people have gotten measles since September. Officials blamed the outbreak on "anti-vaxxers" spreading false information. The order applies to anyone living, working or going to school in four ZIP codes in the neighborhood and requires all unvaccinated people at risk of exposure to the virus to get the vaccine, including children over 6 months old. The city can't physically force someone to get a vaccination, but officials said people who ignore the order could be fined $1,000. ASSOCIATED PRESS

3rd juvenile charged in fire at Shakespeare Theatre

4 Police say a third juvenile has been charged in connection with a fire in January that destroyed a long-closed Connecticut theater where Katharine Hepburn, Christopher Plummer, James Earl Jones and other stars once performed. The American Shakespeare Theatre in Stratford was burned Jan. 13. Stratford police on Tuesday announced that the third juvenile is charged with third-degree conspiracy to commit arson, third-degree burglary and other offenses. No name or exact age was released. Two teens, ages 18 and 17, were charged Monday with arson in connection with the fire. Their names were not released because both were juveniles at the time of the blaze. The theater was built in 1955 but had not hosted a play since 1989. It was modeled after London's Globe Theatre, which burned in 1613. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Loughlin, husband and 14 parents face new scam charge

The couple are accused of paying $500,000 in bribes.

"Full House" star Lori Loughlin and her fashion designer husband, Mossimo Giannulli, and 14 other parents were hit Tuesday with a new money laundering charge in the sweeping college admissions bribery scheme.

The move comes a day after fellow actress Felicity Huffman, 12 other parents and a coach agreed to plead guilty — signaling an escalation in the case against the parents who are continuing to fight the allegations against them.

Loughlin and Giannulli were among 33 prominent parents accused of participating in a scheme that involved rigging college entrance exams and bribing coaches at elite universities.

They were arrested last month on a single charge of conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. An indictment brought Tuesday adds a charge of money laundering conspiracy against the couple and 14 other parents.

Amy and Gregory Colburn, a California couple accused of paying $25,000 to cheat on their son's SAT, were indicted on the money laundering and mail fraud conspiracy charges last month.

The parents are accused of paying an admissions consultant, Rick Singer, to cheat on their children's college entrance exams and get their children admitted as athletic recruits at such elite schools as Georgetown and Yale.

Loughlin and Giannulli are accused of paying $500,000 in bribes to get their daughters into the University of Southern California as crew team recruits, even though neither of them played the sport.

They appeared in Boston federal court briefly last week and were not asked to enter a plea. They have not publicly addressed the allegations against them.

Other parents indicted on the new charge Tuesday include Michelle Janavs, whose family developed the microwave snack line Hot Pockets before selling their company, and William McGlashan, who co-founded an investment fund with U2's Bono in 2017.

Huffman, the 56-year-old Emmy winner who stared in ABC's "Desperate Housewives," was accused of paying $15,000 disguised as a charitable donation to have a proctor correct the answers on her daughter's SAT. She and the 12 other parents agreed to plead guilty Monday to a single charge of conspiracy to commit mail fraud and honest services mail fraud.

Prosecutors say they will seek a prison sentence that's on the low end of between four and 10 months for Huffman.

In her first public comments since her arrest, Huffman took responsibility for her actions and said she would accept the consequences.

"My daughter knew absolutely nothing about my actions, and in my misguided and profoundly wrong way, I have betrayed her. This transgression toward her and the public I will carry for the rest of my life. My desire to help my daughter is no excuse to break the law or engage in dishonesty," she said after her plea deal was announced.

Gunmaker to ask Supreme Court to hear the Sandy Hook appeal

AP PHOTO

Facing a newly revived wrongful death lawsuit in Connecticut over the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting, gunmaker Remington is going to the U.S. Supreme Court to argue it can't be sued because of a much-debated federal law that shields firearms manufacturers from liability in most cases.

The Connecticut Supreme Court issued a 4-3 ruling last month saying the Madison, North Carolina-based company can be sued under state law for how it marketed the Bushmaster AR-15-style rifle used to kill 20 first-graders and six educators at the Newtown school in 2012. The decision reinstated part of a lawsuit by some of the victims' families that had been completely dismissed by a lower court judge.

The case is being watched by gun control advocates, gun rights supporters and gun manufacturers across the country, as it has the potential to provide a roadmap for victims of other mass shootings to circumvent the federal law and sue firearm makers. The federal Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act has been criticized by gun control advocates as being too favorable to gun-makers since it took effect in 2005, and it has been used to bar lawsuits over other mass killings.

Remington's lawyers have notified the Connecticut high court that they intend to ask the nation's highest court to hear the company's appeal of last month's decision, according to a motion filed with the state court Friday. The company has until June to file papers with the U.S. Supreme Court.

Lawyers for Remington, Scott Harrington and James Vogts, wrote in the recent motion that the Connecticut high court "recognized that guidance from the Supreme Court is needed by acknowledging that congressional intent to protect firearm manufacturers from litigation is not clear, and it is 'possible that Congress intended to broadly immunize firearm sellers from liability' for the conduct that Plaintiffs have alleged."

In the majority opinion, Associate Justice Richard Palmer wrote that Remington can be sued under one of the few exceptions to the 2005 federal law — for claims alleging violations of laws related to the sale and marketing of firearms.

Remington is being sued by a survivor and relatives of nine victims of the Sandy Hook shooting. The plaintiffs' lawyer, Joshua Koskoff, has accused the company of targeting younger, at-risk males through "militaristic marketing and astute product placement in violent first-person shooter games."

Koskoff said Tuesday that the case "is a matter of law for the state of Connecticut."

"As Connecticut's Supreme Court said, its decision to revive the case stemmed from 'the traditional authority of our legislature and our courts to protect the people of Connecticut from the pernicious practices alleged in the present case,'" Koskoff said in a statement.

Democratic U.S. Sen. Richard Blumenthal, of Connecticut, and others watching the case have said the ruling reminded them of early court victories against tobacco companies that led them to disclose damaging internal documents and later agree to billions of dollars in legal settlements over sickened smokers.

The Sandy Hook shooter, 20-year-old Adam Lanza, played violent video games. The Connecticut child advocate said Lanza's severe and deteriorating mental health problems, his preoccupation with violence and access to his mother's legal weapons "proved a recipe for mass murder."

Lanza killed his mother, Nancy, at their Newtown home before going to the school, where he killed himself as police arrived. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Man pleads not guilty to kidnapping woman outside nightclub

GETTY IMAGES

A Rhode Island man charged with kidnapping a Boston woman from her birthday celebration whose body was later found in the trunk of his car has pleaded not guilty. Louis Coleman III appeared Tuesday in U.S. District Court to face a charge of kidnapping resulting in death, which carries a possible death sentence if he is convicted. He continues to be held without bail.

Authorities say the 32-year-old Coleman kidnapped Jassy Correia on Feb. 24 from outside a Boston nightclub where she had been celebrating her 23rd birthday. Police say he was later captured on surveillance video carrying her body into his Providence apartment.

Coleman was stopped in Delaware four days later with Correia's body in the trunk. His attorney, David Hoose, said outside court he'd "rather not comment." ASSOCIATED PRESS

How to celebrate the 'Thrones' final season premiere

From dusk till dawn, we "GoT" your day filled with "Game of Thrones" fun.

MOIRA CALLAHAN
letters@metro.us

After the last season wrapped in late 2017, fans of HBO's beloved "Game of Thrones" were forced to wait well over a year for its return. However, the final season is here, mere days away. It may be spring, but winter is coming on April 14 at 9 p.m. on HBO. With brunches, trivia nights and a final viewing party, this is how you celebrate the "Game of Thrones" final season premiere.

Brunch at City Tap House
To celebrate the "Game of Thrones" final season, City Tap House is transforming their bar into Winterfell for its #Brunchiscoming pregame party. Ommegang Brewery will be putting out a selection of "GoT" beers (Queen of the Seven Kingdoms, Mother of Dragons, For the Throne). In addition, City Tap's kitchen will be putting together a number of specials. A King's Slayer Limb, which is a smoked turkey leg tossed in house buffalo sauce and dusted with their signature 10-spice rub, served with fries ($19); Mother of Dragon Eggs, a foursome of homemade deviled eggs topped with crispy bacon bits & truffle aioli ($11); and the Night's Watch Meat Pie, a French meat pie mix of pork, beef and potatoes topped with gravy ($19). You don't want to miss out on this celebration! April 14, 11 a.m.- 3 p.m., City Tap House, 10 Boston Wharf Road, citytap.com

HBO

Glass House Brunch
Glass House is a bar, restaurant and modern-day meeting house inspired by the history of Kendall Square. Glass House invites you to their "Game of Thrones"-themed brunch to celebrate the premiere of season 8! Bring your friends and enter Winterfell where Glass House will be serving "GoT" themed specialty cocktails and food. Plus, a bunch of surprise "GoT" activities! April 14, 11 a.m.- 3 p.m., Glass House, 450 Kendall St., Cambridge, glasshouse-cambridge.com

Crawl of Thrones Pub Crawl
In anticipation of the last season, join The Phoenix Landing in an epic pub crawl down Mass Ave. in Cambridge. Refresh your memory of the last 7 seasons with "GoT" trivia, and enjoy some food and drink specials while you're at it. The crawl will include "GoT"-themed prizes, a free pub crawl T-shirt and more! April 13, 1 p.m.-6 p.m., The Phoenix Landing, 512 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, phoenixlandingbar.com

Scorpio Bar and The Grand Watch Party
This epic night begins at the Scorpio Bar with a "Game of Thrones" viewing party from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. After the viewing party, DJ Kristian Nairn, a.k.a Hodor from "Game of Thrones," will be hosting a night at The Grand from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. With this collaboration, you will definitely be celebrating the "Game of Thrones" final season premiere the right way. April 14, 7 p.m.-2 a.m., Scorpion Bar, 58 Seaport Blvd., scorpionboston.com

Why is 'GoT' so successful & addictive?

Metro investigates the phenomenon.

DMITRY BELYAEV

What started as a niche epic fantasy book series by American novelist and short story writer George R. R. Martin has now become a global cultural phenomenon thanks to HBO's "Game of Thrones" TV series. According to statistics, season 7's finale was viewed by more than 16.5 million people around the world, and that number is expected to grow for the last six episodes scheduled to premiere on April 14.

"GoT" became such phenomenon because it broke the mold for what can successfully be done on television. Even more than other shows focused on antiheroes, it created morally ambiguous, flawed, and complicated characters the likes of which we had not seen before. Experts confirmed that thanks to its medieval fantasy setting and shocking sex and brutal violence scenes, "Game of Thrones" became a perfect, escapist antidote of too much modern world filled with political correctness and sensitivity.

"I think we're living in a time where more and more people are getting tired of being lectured about how sensitive we need to be and how we need to watch every other word that comes out of our mouths because someone might be 'triggered,' traumatized or feel oppressed. In 'Game of Thrones' we can see a large cast of characters that can all be equally brutal, duplicitous and amoral and we can get a cathartic thrill out of their bad behavior. Because in the "GoT" world of dragons and monsters they are far enough removed from our reality," Barna Donovan, Ph.D., professor of film and media studies at the U.S.-based Saint Peter's University, explained to Metro.

Emilia Clarke as Daenerys Targaryen with Kit Harington as Jon Snow | HBO

So, the HBO creation combines fantasy, familiar elements of political intrigue and realistic human conflict. On the one hand, the story has rich, colorful, large-scale world building. It transports viewers to a far away, exotic, adventure-filled alternate universe.

"But, on the other hand, the stories are much more realistic and relatable to our real world than the fantasies we have seen in various J.R.R. Tolkien adaptations. 'Game of Thrones' is not another simple quest fantasy about finding treasures or dealing with magical rings and fighting monsters. This show deals with conflicts between nations, social classes, races, as well as drama of people scheming and maneuvering for political power. 'Game of Thrones' is both exotic and otherworldly, while at the same time very familiar and relevant to our own world's conflicts and problems," Donovan added.

Apart from providing a perfect way to escape reality and many other factors that make the series so successful, it is a plot heavy adventure show. Thus, the wish to find out "what happens" drives the desire to view.

"Also, the expense of its production makes it very lavish and visually impressive. Its story isn't tied to a particular region of the world which makes it more widely accessible," Amanda D. Lotz, professor of digital media and communication at Queensland University of Technology, stated. "Its violence may detract some, but it otherwise offers dastardly villains, compelling heroes, and many different characters for audiences to root for."

However, it's still hard to say if "Game of Thrones" might be the greatest show of all time. According to experts, we have seen series over the years that are superb in so many different ways that it becomes difficult to create a fair comparison.

"But 'GoT' is likely an important first chapter in a story about significant change in international distribution and a new stage of internationalization of the television industry," Lotz said.

Yet, in the future it could be considered a "classic" and be referenced for a very long time as one of the best examples of what is being referred to as "peak TV" in its rich.

"This is the kind of show that fans will enjoy watching again and new fans will keep discovering. With its very human stories about power, family, politics, and intrigue, 'Game of Thrones' deals with universal themes that will stay relevant for many generations, much in the same way that classic literature survives because it always speaks to the human condition," Donovan concluded.

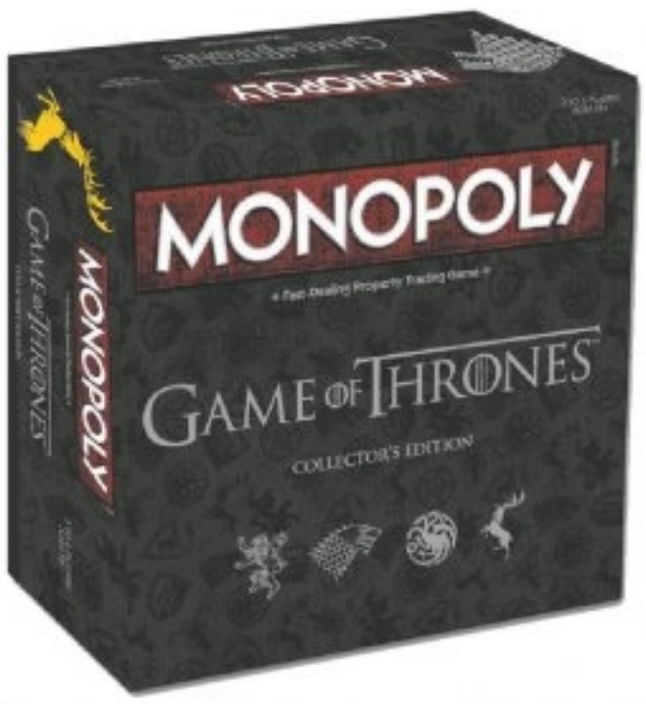
THRONE TOILET

Many fans of the series have dreamt of sitting on the Iron Throne. Well, it is possible – in the bathroom! A few years ago, Tim Baker, Hollywood props designer, created an Iron Throne in the form of a toilet for a fan, so he could feel like Westeros' king while being in a bathroom. The throne is not for sale, however, it went viral on YouTube.

MONOPOLY

The award-winning series has also reached board games. Hasbro has unveiled Game Of Thrones Monopoly just in time ahead of the last season. Its tokens are inspired by the Honorary sigils of the great houses: Targaryen, Stark, Lannister, Baratheon Tyrell, and Greyjoy. Both game board and box feature graphics of the HBO TV show. Monopoly also includes 32 holdfasts and 12 castles in place of houses and hotels, while the properties are named as locations from the series.



WHISKEY

Another product that has caught attention of fans ahead of the season eight is the special edition of White Walker by Johnnie Walker whiskey, created by that brand together with HBO. The bottle features icy lands of the White Walkers in shades of white and blue. Meanwhile, the Walker — Johnnie Walker's logo — is converted into one of the series characters. When the bottle is subjected to low temperatures, its eyes are shining.

SNEAKERS

Adidas sneakers line, inspired by "Game of Thrones," has become very popular among fans and on the market in general. The German sports brand has recently launched this collection stating that "these Ultra Boost feature the colors and details of the noble families and warring factions of the Seven Kingdoms and beyond The Wall." It consists of six models inspired by the Targaryen, Lannister, Stark, as well as the Night's Watch and the White Walkers.

BEER

The final season of the HBO series led Brewery Ommegang and HBO Licensing & Retail to create a "Game of Thrones"-inspired beverage called 'For The Throne'. This strong golden ale is co-fermented with Pinot Grigio and Viognier grape juices, then bottle conditioned with champagne yeast. The beer will be available since April this year.

Fenway doesn't fix a thing

Opening Day at Fenway was spoiled by yet another Red Sox loss.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Rafael Devers shows frustration during the Red Sox's loss to Toronto on Tuesday. BILLIE WEISS/BOSTON RED SOX

The 2019 Red Sox spoiled a beautiful pregame ceremony for the 2018 World Series champs as they continued their losing ways in the home opener at Fenway on Tuesday, falling to the Blue Jays, 7-5. The Sox are now 3-9 in 2019.

The most concerning issue in this one for the Sox was the ugly outing turned in by ace Chris Sale, who through three outings this year has not exactly looked like the guy who dominated Major League Baseball last season. Sale worked just 4.0 innings against Toronto, allowing seven hits and five earned runs. He struck out just three batters.

RBI singles by Freddy Galvis and Lourdes Gurriel allowed the Jays to hang four runs on Sale in the third and the fourth, and Gurriel also stole home on Sale later in the fourth to add insult to injury.

Unlike many Sale starts in the regular season last year, this loss could not be blamed on the Boston bats.

The Sox collected eight hits on the day and got on base an additional three times via base on balls.

In the first inning Mitch Moreland took a weak fastball from Matt Shoemaker and plopped into the bullpen for a solo homer. Mookie Betts delivered a solo bomb in the sixth when he sent a line drive into the Monster seats.

The Sox pulled to within one run in the eighth when Xander Bogaerts drove in JD Martinez with an opposite field double down the right field line, but the Blue Jays got that run right back in the ninth thanks to a Galvis RBI double.

Ringing in the new year at Fenway

Tuesday wasn't all doom and gloom as the Sox received their 2018 championship rings. Receiving some of the loudest ovations were David Price and Nathan Eovaldi, both of whom came up huge in October last season.

The Super Bowl champion Patriots also received a standing "O" as Rob Gronkowski, Julian Edelman and Stephon Gilmore threw out the first pitch(es). For the record, Gronk's pitch was low and away, Edelman's throw was high and outside, and Gilmore's toss likely would have registered as a strike.

Aries Dealing with a close friend or relative will be difficult if you cannot agree on what's right. Walk away from situations that tempt you to do something you shouldn't.

Taurus Exaggeration will lead to trouble. Play things close to the vest and be careful about publicly discussing sensitive matters. Concentrate on getting things done.

Gemini Certain situations will need to be monitored to avoid leaks that could damage someone's reputation. Don't reveal secrets, meddle in other people's affairs or spread gossip.

Cancer Get the go-ahead if needed, and start putting your ideas to good use. A contract or settlement will change the way you think about certain past situations.

Leo Jealousy will probably set someone off, causing a disruption or feud, but as long as you go about your business and finish what you start, you'll come out on top.

Virgo Experience and learn all you can. Get involved in something you've never done before or get together with people who inspire and motivate you to expand your mind and interests.

Libra No one needs to know about your business. The less information you offer, the less interference you will face. Taking a day trip or reconnecting with someone from your past will be eye-opening.

Scorpio Surround yourself with people you feel comfortable with. Discuss your feelings and intentions. Love, romance and personal improvements will lead to greater confidence and stability.

Sagittarius Know when to walk away from a situation that isn't good for you. Don't let anger take charge when you should be putting your energy into personal gain.

Capricorn You'll see things differently if you discuss something that happened with someone who shared the experience with you. What you discover will encourage you to make a positive change.

Aquarius Move things around and make a space that will motivate you to revisit an activity you used to enjoy. Honing skills will lead to new opportunities.

Pisces Trust in your ability to get things done on your own, and avoid getting into an altercation with someone who always tries to take the reins. Help someone who appreciates you. EUGENIA LAST
